Strategy #1

Embrace Leadership!
Early learning leaders rely on self-awareness

Comfortable being vulnerable?

Know what pushes your buttons?

Accept strengths and limitations?

Use reflection?

My impact on others?

Adapt to what's new?

Demonstrate responsibility and integrity

Exert self-discipline?

True to my word?

Loyal?

Use tolerance and flexibility?

Consistent, honest, fair?

Focused through follow-up?

Treat others with respect and dignity?

Leadership depends on communication.

Early learning educators practice leadership by using:

- Self-awareness
- Responsibility and integrity
- Clear and effective communication

IMPACT

Consider ways every early learning educator seeing herself as a leader could contribute to improved outcomes for children and strengthen early learning systems.
Strategy #2

Embody Optimism

What does it mean for you, as an early learning leader, to embody...

How we define OPTIMISM
Exemplary leaders possess optimism that helps generate the energy and commitment necessary to achieve results.

Warren Bennis

Optimists are more resilient in the face of failures and setbacks.

Daniel Kahneman

A few tips:

• Invite others to think about something optimistic that happened this week.
• Substitute the word effective, strength, and optimistic when you find yourself using positive.
• Listen for the optimistic in someone’s story and call their attention to it.
Early learning educators practice optimism by:

- Looking for moments of optimism in one's own work.
- Inviting others to think about something optimistic.
- Intentionally choosing the words effective, strength, and optimistic rather than positive.
- Listening for the ‘optimistic’ in someone’s story and calling their attention to it.

IMPACT

Consider ways that embracing optimism could contribute to improved outcomes for children and strengthen early learning systems.

Strategy #3

Uncover Wisdom
Embrace leadership...

Embody optimism ...

Uncover wisdom...

- What do you see?
- What do you want her to do?
- What would quality look like?
- Why is it important for children's learning?
- What would a glimmer of effectiveness be?
- How would you talk with her?

Early learning educators practice uncovering wisdom by:

- Looking for what is working and unpacking the actions (how to) and the importance (why it matters).

- Focusing on how to build on the effective step by step and validating progress.

IMPACT

Consider ways that uncovering wisdom could contribute to improved outcomes for children and strengthen early learning systems.

Learning Opportunities

Early learning educators practice coherence by:

- Making decisions with intentionality
- Carefully reflecting on decisions to ensure alignment with the path
- Clearly communicating the what and why of decisions to others in ALIGNMENT

out of ALIGNMENT
Pause and reflect...

In what ways could you use this model of quality to support you in strengthening your program?

IMPACT

Consider ways coherence could contribute to improved outcomes for children and strengthen early learning systems.

Leadership and learning are indispensable to each other.
